Executive Development and Education

Our readers don't just read the NBR – they use it!

The NBR is a business tool used to make critical decisions and to guide companies, which means that our readers are deeply engaged with our content. They are part of a network dedicated to doing business intelligently, and are exactly the people our advertisers are trying to reach.

The NBR reaches both major corporates and SME clients, which makes this feature an ideal way to put your message in front of your specific target market.

Feature description:

As the New Zealand economy picks up speed, many businesses and their executives are looking for the best new approaches to gain a competitive edge and a bigger share than their rivals. Staying ahead of the game in an era when the way business is run has completely been revolutionised requires the latest insights and approaches.

That's where education comes in, whether leadership and executive education programmes, postgraduate qualifications or shorter courses offering practical and relevant knowledge on new approaches to business.

When it comes to leadership and executive education programmes, a number of universities and corporate training providers offer a variety of programmes, constantly being revised to take new advances and companies' own needs into account. Professional trainers add an alternative tool selection, designing professional instruction and resources for specific firms needs.

Topics in NBR's special Executive Development and Education feature may include:

- What courses are most popular right now?
- What should businesses do to get the most from their training and development budget?
- What skills do business heads desperately need their employees to have?
